

For the prevention and cure of BILIOUS AND MALIGNANT FEVERS
is recommended

Hahn's Anti-Bilious Pills
THIS Medicine has been attended with a degree of success highly grateful to the inventor's feelings in several parts of the West Indies and in the Southern and Middle States, &c.

The testimony of a number of persons can be adduced, who have reason to believe that a timely use of this salutary remedy has, under Providence, preserved their lives when in the most alarming circumstances.

Facts of this conclusive nature speak more in favour of a medicine than columns of pompous eulogy founded on mere assertion.

It is not indeed presumptuously proposed as an infallible cure, but the inventor has every possible reason that can result from extensive experience for believing that a dose of these Pills taken once in every two weeks during the prevalence of our bilious fevers, will prove an infallible preventive; and further,
that in the earlier stages of those diseases their use will very generally succeed in restoring health, and frequently in cases esteemed desperate and beyond the power of common remedies.

The operation of these pills is perfectly mild, so as to be used with safety by persons in every situation and of every age.
They are excellently adapted to carry off superfluous bile and prevent its morbid secretions—to restore and amend the appetite—to produce a free perspiration and thereby prevent colds which are often of fatal consequences. A dose never fails to remove a cold if taken on its first appearance: they are celebrated for removing habitual costiveness—sickness at the stomach and severe head-ache—and ought to be taken by all persons on a change of climate.

They have been found remarkably efficacious in preventing and curing disorders attendant on long voyages, and should be procured and carefully preserved for use by every seaman.

Hamilton's Elixir.
A sovereign remedy for colds, obsteinate coughs, asthma, sore throats, catarrhs, and approaching consumptions—
To persons who have children afflicted with the HOOPING COUGH, this discovery is of the first magnitude, as it affords immediate relief, checks the progress, and in a short time entirely removes the most cruel disorders to which children are liable. The Elixir is perfectly agreeable, and the dose so small that no difficulty arises in taking it.

Hamilton's Grand Restorative.
Is recommended as an invaluable medicine for the speedy relief and permanent cure of Nervous Disorders, Violent cramps in Consumptions, the stomach and Lowness of spirits, back
Loss of appetite, Indigestion
Impurity of blood, Melancholy
Hysterical affection, Gout in the stomach Inward weaknesses, Pains in the limbs and debility, Relaxations, etc.

Hamilton's Essence and Extract of Mustard.
A safe and effectual remedy for acute and chronic rheumatism, gout, rheumatic gout, palsy, lumbago, numbness, white swellings, chilblains, sprains, bruises, pain in the face and neck, etc. etc.

Lee's Ointment for the Itch.
Warranted an infallible remedy at one application, may be used with perfect safety by pregnant women, or on infants a week old, not containing a particle of mercury or any dangerous ingredient whatsoever, and not accompanied with that tormenting smart which attends the application of other remedies.

Hahn's true & genuine German Corn Plaster.
An infallible remedy for corns, speedily removing them root and branch, without giving any pain.

The Genuine Persian Lotion.
So celebrated among the fashionable throughout Europe, is an invaluable cosmetic, perfectly innocent and safe, free from corrosive and repellent minerals,
the basis of other lotions, and of unparalleled efficacy in removing blemishes of the face and skin, freckles, pimples, inflammatory redness, scurfs, tetter, ringworms, sunburns, prickly heat, &c.

Hahn's genuine Eye Water.
A sovereign remedy for all diseases of the eyes, whether the effect of natural weakness or of accident.

Tooth Ache Drops.
The only remedy yet discovered which gives immediate and lasting relief in the most severe instances.

Lee's Infallible Ague and Fever Drops.
For the cure of agues, remittent and intermittent fevers.

At the place of sale, pamphlets may be had gratis, describing cures performed by the above medicines, the number, importance and respectability of which, fully justify every article of this

Original Miscellany.

PROVIDENCE—NO. II.

Its summons into being, with like ease,
A whole creation, and a single grain.

"How doth God know?" cries the infidel admirer of Epicurus; "can he judge through the dark cloud? Thick clouds are a covering to him that he seeth not; and he walketh in the circuit of Heaven?"

As we may arrive at the conclusion of the being and attributes of God, in the temple of natural religion, so also the belief in Divine Providence is placed within reach of the light of nature; and to deny the Almighty fiat and agency in the creation of the world, and his providence in governing it, is the most dangerous kind of atheism; for, like the arch-apostate transformed into an angel of light, it aims to lead and conceal blows at the existence of the Deity—it strikes at that while it makes professions of fidelity, through this means to surprise, if possible, the more successfully, the relaxed vigilance of his friends. Epicurus, therefore, was consistent in his creed, in denying Jehovah both his creative power in the formation of the world and his providential care over his works.

But what an incongruous absurdity do they fall into who deny the government of a Divine Providence in the world?—At the creation of the world, when the morning stars sang together, and all the sons of God shouted for joy, they would have the Ancient of days slumbering on his throne, while chance was busily employed in building the mighty fabric of the universe, bringing light out of darkness and order out of chaos; and shall I say—but do not shudder—they would have chance peopling the world with intelligent beings, who have a providence to forecast and contrive how to preserve and govern that which they make or acquire?

From such horrid atheism as this even an enlightened heathen would turn away in abhorrence and disgust. And what the light of nature condemns must be too absurd indeed to deserve a serious answer from revealed religion.

What can an argument prove, but that he who urges it has lost his reason on the dark and stormy ocean of atheism, which supports the monstrous thesis, at which a heathen is offended, that he that made the eye cannot see—that he who put providence in the heart of man has none himself? We have shown from the light of nature, reasoning apart from revelation, that there must be a God, who created by his infinite wisdom and almighty power the world; that intelligence every where shines from the face of nature; and intelligence involves design, design a mind to forecast; and that this infinite mind must reside in God—a being far removed from the finite conceptions and comprehension of his creatures; and we now must be convinced of the remark, that to deny him a providence "who rules in the armies of Heaven and among the inhabitants of the earth," is the readiest way to impugn his very existence.

The existence of the Supreme Being is deeply involved in the conceptions which we form of his divine nature, being, character, and attributes, and will always be endangered in a just proportion to the erroneous opinions we may entertain of any of these. The remark is a just one, that a defective Deity is no Deity at all. Consequently, the Supreme Being, to be worthy of his creatures' adorations, their confidence and their trust, their gratitude and their obedience, must to their finite minds be

A God full orb'd,
In his whole round of attributes complete.
And then, and not until then, will they repose in confidence in their trust in him, and dwell in delightful security under the shadow of his throne—— who possesses Omnipotence to Summon into being, with like ease,

A whole creation, and a single grain—
Omnipotence to attend them in their journey through this desert to the possession of unending felicity in Heaven, and Omniscience to see every tear-drop before it falls from their eyes, and every groan that ascends from their hearts up into his compassionate ear. Our belief (Christians) is, that he sees our wants before they are known or felt by us; that he often sends temporal prosperity to the wicked in wrath, and withholds it from the righteous in love; and that the light of glory, when reflected in eternity upon his works, will clear up all these difficulties in his divine providence, in the kingdom of Grace, and among the productions of nature

Alexandria, March 2, 1818.

FROM OUR CORRESPONDENT AT WASHINGTON.

Saturday, February 28, 1818.

The report of Thursday's committee of the whole on the petition of the Irish emigrant societies, mentioned in my last letter, was yesterday brought under the consideration of the house, when Mr. Taylor moved to reverse the resolution annexed to it, by striking out the word "not," so that it should read that "the prayer of the petition ought to be granted."

Mr. Taylor's motion was supported by Mr. Johnson of Kentucky, Mr. Baldwin, Mr. Forsyth, Mr. Desha, Mr. Comstock, Mr. Talmadge, Mr. Spencer, and Mr. Livermore: so that it had every aid that could be derived from multiplicity of advocates and personal influence; but reason and sound policy were so palpably against it, and were so well sustained by Mr. Robertson, of Louisiana, Mr. Smith, Mr. Poindexter, Mr. Cobb, Mr. Mercer, and Mr. Williams, of N. C. that the house rejected the motion. Perhaps the greatest deformity in the population of this country is that occasioned by the obstinate preservation of their national character and morals by the lower part of the German inhabitants of Pennsylvania; who, if their parents had been equally distributed through other states, and mingled with the Americans, and the British, Irish, Scotch, and other emigrants, would, this day, stand much higher than they do in the scale of moral beings. Let the county courts of that state tell the rest! With a view to the people of the United States, and the forming of that body, the first object of our legislators ought to be, to efface as far as possible all the features of distinct nationality—to amalgamate the various breeds in to one, and let the currents of population flow into the union from what countries they may, to make them all as soon as possible unite in one common flood; and, as soon as possible, too, deposit the more gross sediments of the various soils from which they sprung. Many evil propensities and national antipathies cling to the hearts and inhere in the manners of the lower orders of people in all the European countries. When they become fellow-citizens these ought to be shaken off, for the common good; but if emigrants be systematically placed in a state of national segregation, those barbarisms will increase. The mutual antipathy felt by low Spaniards and Portuguese, to which even that subsisting between French and English is a comparatively charitable sentiment, is nothing to the inveterate dislike of the low Germans in Pennsylvania to the Anglo-American Pennsylvanians, or English, for so they denominate all who are not of German origin, and do not speak that melodious language. Had they not isolated themselves so much as they have from their fellow citizens, that, as well as other distinctive marks of a still less creditable kind, would scarcely have existence at this day.

The amount of domestic exports from the state of Maryland should have been five millions and upwards, and not six, as inserted yesterday.

Among all the inventions and novelties with which the present age abounds, we do not remember to have read of any thing equal to a curiosity now in the possession of a gentleman in this town. We allude to a first-rate line of battle-ship, in miniature, so perfect in all its parts as to bear the most minute scrutiny. Its length is 6 feet, from the figure-head to the extreme end of the tail; its mean breadth 18 inches, and its height, from the keel to the royal-mast-head, 7-feet 2 inches. It is copper bottomed, with sails, rigging and spars complete, and carries 186 guns—the quarter and stern galleries are elegantly carved and decorated, and contain 854 squares of glass—metal guns, of suitable calibre, have also been cast, and the usual boats cut out of solid wood and equipped. In fact, nothing whatever has been omitted in the construction, which can be found belonging to an actual man of war. The ingenious contriver of this piece of mechanism is a native of England, who arrived in this country some weeks since. He has been employed at it occasionally for the last five years, during which time he never was on board a ship one hour. But what forms the extraordinary novelty in this instance is the fact of the whole design having been executed by the use of no other tools than those employed by shoemakers in the prosecution of their business—if we except one small chisel. The builder served his time regularly to the shoemaking business, never saw a vessel of any kind on the stocks, and still remains ignorant of the first rules of ship building. The rigging is all manufactured by himself from shoethread, without the assistance of any person or implement whatever. The whole is mounted on a carriage with wheels, by which it may be drawn with safety.

We understand it is the proprietor's design to proceed with it to Washington, in the hope that a portion of that liberal encouragement for which its citizens have ever been distinguished, will be extended towards him, and that he may dispose of it at a price nearly if not quite equal, in value to the time and labor which has been bestowed upon it.

SENNA SAMA.
On the subject of Senna Sama's reception and performance in the city of New York, (and who is engaged at our Theatre for this evening) a writer in the New York Republican Chronicle of December last, makes the following very judicious remarks:

EAST INDIAN JUGGLER.
We are convinced that modest merit is too often overlooked in this age of blaspheems and wind-badders; for it is a fact, that almost any ignorant pretender, or professional quack, can puff himself into possession of fame and fortune, while unassuming retiring genius is suffered to languish in cold neglect, and penury and scorn, under a more ungenerous and ungrateful. It may, perhaps, excite a smile that we make an application of this remark to the subject of this article; but we are serious.

When Senna Sama first arrived in this city from England, he issued a modest notice of his intention of exhibiting a specimen of the rare and wonderful powers with which nature and art have endowed him—powers which had previously astonished the princes, nobles and literati of enlightened Britain.

Of one thing, however, he was totally ignorant—he had yet to learn that, in this country, a bladder of wind outweighs a globe of gold—he knew not the wonderful efficacy of puffing—no pompous bills were posted at the corners of our streets, whose huge staring capitals displayed all the hues of the rainbow—the newspapers were silent. The consequence was, nothing great or respectable was anticipated, and but few attended the exhibition. Such was the reception of this singular stranger, that he began to fear he had either mistaken his own talents, or been deceived in the opinion he had been taught to entertain of American curiosity, taste and liberality.

At length, however, rumor accidentally caught a whisper of the wonderful talents, astonishing muscular powers, and unparalleled activity of Senna Sama—since that fortunate moment his name has been trumpeted round by that loquacious jargon, until our citizens have become convinced that they have a treasure among them, and knew it not. His houses are now filled to overflowing—beauty, taste and fashion, flock to his exhibition, and the "white turban'd East Indian" is all the go. He had publicly announced that he should depart this day for the southward; but some of our most respectable citizens have absolutely insisted upon his remaining here another week.

at the period of the application for relief.
Savannah, February 17.
NEW SPANISH DECREE.
To the politeness of a commercial gentleman, we are indebted for a Havana paper of the 30th ult. It contains a decree of the King of Spain, permitting emigrants from any part of Europe and America to settle in Cuba, and after remaining there five years to leave it, if they be so inclined, with whatever property they may acquire, free of duty or impost.

This decree (which is in the hands of a translator, and shall appear as early as possible in our columns) cannot fail in greatly improving that rich and beautiful island, by drawing to it numbers of French and Americans from different parts of the United States, and planters from the English Islands. It is not to be presumed that many of them will choose it as a permanent residence—but that they will stay their characteristic enterprise and industry must have the most salutary influence in eradicating the slothful habits of the natives, and in attaching a respectability to agriculture hitherto unknown in the Spanish colonies.

From the Baltimore Federal Republican.

SPAIN AND PORTUGAL.
The intelligence received by the recent arrival from England, does not seem of a character very interesting or important. It is stated that the Spanish court is putting in motion every engine of requisition, or as some would say, of requisition, to compel the South American patriots to obedience. Russia seems not farther pledged than the lean of a fleet for this purpose, for it appears that the Russian crews were on the point of departure from England after the fleet had been brought to a safe anchorage in an English port, and delivered up to the Spanish minister. In the mean time it is still mentioned, and with considerable confidence, in the foreign papers, that England is to act the part of a mediator between Ferdinand and his revolted colonies. The controversy between Spain and Portugal seems to wear an unfavorable aspect—the point at present in debate appears to be, Spain insists on the restitution of the Fortress of Monte Viedo, now occupied by the troops of his Brazilian majesty. His Brazilian majesty refuses to make thiscession until the question between Ferdinand and his revolted subjects is terminated, either by conquest or by treaty. Spain insists on the delivery of this fortress as a sine qua non to all negotiation—that she wished to land her troops at that station which are ultimately to be employed in the reduction of Buenos Ayres. To this his Brazilian majesty replies, that Monte Viedo was not seized by him from motives of personal ambition, but as an indispensable measure for the security of his own dominions, and to prevent the spread of the revolutionary war in his Brazilian provinces—that thiscession would be considered as an act of open hostility, on the part of the South American patriots. He further declares that the seizure of the fortress of Monte Viedo was not made from the Spanish monarch, or from any of his acknowledged officers, but from General Artagas, who was an ally of the patriots, and consequently opposed to the government of the Spanish monarch; but his Brazilian majesty wishes to observe a strict and rigid neutrality in the contest between Spain and her revolted colonies, and that the cession of this fortress would be an essential departure from this course of pacific policy. His Brazilian majesty enquires if thiscession was made, what confidence could he repose in the successful issue of an expedition against a place that baffled a much larger British force than Spain is capable of sending, and in case of failure what security could his catholic majesty afford to him that his Brazilian provinces would not fall an easy prey to the victorious patriots of South America?

Thus according to the latest accounts, stands the matter in issue between Spain and Portugal. The Spanish monarch threatens the seizure of Portugal by way of indemnity for the loss of Monte Viedo, or to compel his Brazilian majesty to an acquiescence. Whether this threat is to be carried into execution on the part of the Spanish monarch, time only can determine. His Brazilian majesty ever since his departure from Portugal seems to have been perfectly weaned from all attachment to his native country, he has been so long in the arms of his South American nurse. It may admit of a question whether the European allies will look upon this meditated seizure of Portugal with indifference, or whether that very measure might not prevent one, or more of them from affording to Ferdinand any assistance in his war with his revolted colonies. The English ministry (if credit is to be given to the English papers) have interested themselves in this controversy between Spain and South America, and they have gone so far as to say that all mediation will be hopeless if the Russian armament sails. It is further said that these remonstrances of the English ministry have been utterly disregarded. If this fact is true, it is very apparent that Ferdinand does not entertain any serious idea of an amicable mediation, and in all human probability he looks with an eye of as much jealousy on the interference of the English court in this business, as he would on the absolute independence of his South American subjects. Ferdinand does not very well relish the idea of having his South American Portugal thrown open for the reception of English merchandise, a degradation to which he will inevitably be compelled to submit if he accedes to the proposition that England is to act the part of a mediator.

From the Connecticut Courant.

THE BRIEF REMARKER.
The old Persian rule, not to speak till there is something weighty to say, though well enough in theory, is too difficult of practice. For, with most of mankind, and especially those who have the phlegm of the English or the Dutch blood in their veins, it would be an intolerable restriction upon the freedom of speech.

Conversation is a sort of commerce, in which there is absolute necessity for the circulation of coin of small denominations, as well as of that which is possessed of great intrinsic value. Not that countenance is ever, or on any account, to be given to base coin. Far from the pale of colloquial commerce be the profligate oath, the obscene or impious jest, the open or covert slander, the language of deceit and falsehood: far from it be every word of immoral or indecent tenor. It must however be admitted, for such is the fact, that in carrying on this kind of commerce, there is urgent need of small change, and a great deal of it too. For

of this light commodity, many a man of deep learning and excellent moral qualities, makes but a wretched figure in any other company than that of the learned. And how can it be otherwise? Since no part of his capital is adapted to the commerce of common life.

For the most part it is more difficult to set talk a going, than to keep it going after it is begun. Now this difficulty arises from a fastidious or squeamish feeling: each one adhering too strictly to the aforementioned rule, not to speak till something of consequence is thought of to be said. For which reason the interview begins with profound silence: the individuals gazing upon one another, and each longing to put the tongue in motion, but all alike unable to find a pertinent observation to commence with—and what renders the case the more deplorable, is that the longer the silence is continued, the harder it is to break it.

Now to obviate this distressing difficulty, custom has introduced into colloquial commerce a singular kind of small change consisting of truisms, or self-evident sayings. As this manner of speech is fairly within the compass of every one's ability, so it has the advantage of always steering clear of contradiction.

A and B, for example, happening to meet together, the one instantly utters a truism, which the other agrees to forthwith, affirming roundly, and without any mental reservation, that the thing is even so: And then the said affirmant, in his turn brings forth another truism, which the politeness of the first speaker accedes to with a prompt profession of undoubting belief. By this time, or at least after the interchange of some half a dozen truisms, the conversation begins either to deepen or to lower; and peradventure it comes to be quite edifying in its progress.

There is no other single source so prolific of auxiliaries of talk, or rather of means to begin it with, as the weather. It is pleasant or unpleasant, warm or cool, wet or dry, calm, breezy, or boisterous. The sun either shines or it does not. There are signs in the heavens, sometimes of rain, sometimes of snow, sometimes of heat, and sometimes of cold. Not an evening passes over us but is either moony or starry, or else cloudy and darksome: and the moon herself assumes several different phases in the course of her month.

Now all this, along with a great deal of kindred matter besides, furnishes a never failing abundance to begin talk with, especially in the climate we live in, which, more fortunately for our colloquy than our corporeal well, is so perpetually varying. Whether it rain or shine, whether it be calm or windy, whether the evening be lightsome or dismal dark, in short, whatever turn the weather happens to take, we report the naked truth of it to such persons as we fall in company with, and they frankly acknowledge that, in good sooth, their own impressions and opinions perfectly accord with ours.

Grant, that these truisms, or common place remarks, can neither instruct nor entertain; yet they do no harm, and meanwhile are of special use in the threshold of conversation. But though talkers seem licensed to make a free use of them, the same indulgence belongs not to speakers and writers. This is so important a distinction, that were it generally minded, many a discourse and speech would be abridged one half at least, and many a massy volume would shrink into a puffy pamphlet.

Another method of commencing conversation, particularly with strangers, is assailing them with questions that "come home to their business and bosoms." This method has venerable antiquity on its side. "Whence comest, and whither goest thou? What is thy occupation, and of what people art thou?" were questions with which travellers were wont to be greeted at first sight, in times of old, when manners were natural and unsophisticated; and they seem always to have been answered as frankly, and with the like good humor, as they were asked.

Nor is this custom defensible solely upon the ground of its claims to high acquaint; for, placed merely on its own bottom, much might be said in favor of it. In the first place it gives the stranger a fair opportunity of talking about himself: an employment, for the most part delicious to the heart both of man and woman. Furthermore, it shows that the querist, as a fellow member of the great human family, feels a lively interest in behalf of every one of that family he meets with. And finally, it discovers a load of curious inquisitiveness, inherent in the breasts of none but ingenious mortals, and which, under proper encouragement, seldom fails of turning to some good account. Look ye; the Athenians, who were of all men the most ingenious, had a superabundance of this same curiosity; whilst, on the other hand, we are told by travellers and voyagers, of certain tribes now existing, who manifest no curiosity at all; and that circumstance is considered as a clear mark of their stupidity.

Upon the whole, however, if I might be permitted to give an opinion on so nice a point, I would say, that to begin conversation with remarks upon the weather, is the better way of the two; especially, since the variability of our climate furnishes a colloquial stock of that sort amply enough for the thousandth generation.

Fan-Sash Making.

METAL FAN-SASHES, of various descriptions, will be made by the subscriber, at his shop, lower end of Duke street. The want of a Metal Fan-Sash Manufactory in Alexandria, has hitherto been severely felt by builders and others, who have been compelled to make use of wood; which is neither elegant nor durable. The various forms into which the metal can be shaped have given it a decided superiority, and the difference in the price is very trifling. The subscriber has been at considerable expense in procuring the necessary preparations, and relies on public enterprise for success in the undertaking.

Gentlemen in the country, by sending the dimensions of their sashes, can have them made at the same price as if in town.

French Creek Boarding School.

The following is published for the information of Parents:

HAVING long believed that a School on a plan different from most others in many respects, would be beneficial to society, and apprehending that with all its cares, and the responsibility inseparable from such a concern, I could more cheerfully devote my time to the education of children than to any other business, I have concluded to establish a BOARDING SCHOOL FOR GIRLS. With this view I have purchased the FRENCH CREEK FARM, four miles east of the yellow springs, on the Narritown and Philadelphia road, situated in Pike-land and Vincent townships, Chester county, twenty-seven miles from Philadelphia, combining many conveniences for the support of such an institution; and having let the farm, etc. in a way calculated to supply the family with provisions, I propose to devote my attention, with the aid of suitable assistants, to the education of the children who may be placed under my care.

In selecting the pupils, it is not proposed to be governed entirely by their age, nor to require that they shall all be members of the religious society of Friends; but as the school rules will be very few in number and very simple; it is my wish that none may be sent contrary to their own inclination, nor any one who would not be likely to be good examples to the other scholars, and treat them with kindness and affection.

The price for board and tuition will be two hundred Dollars per annum, one quarter always to be paid in advance—no restrictions respecting the kind of clothing are intended, nor respecting the frequency of the changes that parents may require; the washing will be charged at the ordinary price per dozen—children may be admitted for one quarter only, and such as are entered for a longer period, may nevertheless be removed at the expiration of any quarter.

The communication with Philadelphia will be frequent and easy by stage, and a house of entertainment kept by the farmer for the accommodation of persons having business at the school.

Reading, Writing, Arithmetic, English Grammar, Geography and the use of Maps and globes, will be taught, together with such other branches as the progress of the children and experience may render expedient. The school to open the first of the 5th month next. For further information apply to Edward Stabler, Alexandria, or to

Dr. Lee's Gennine (Windham) Bilious Pills.

Thompson, agent, joint proprietor for, &c. and should any be offered for sale without said label on them, the purchaser may be apprised that they are counterfeit.

James Kennedy & Son,
RESPECTFULLY inform the public that they have just received from LEE'S MEDICINE STORE, No. 46, Maiden lane, New-York, a fresh supply of the following valuable MEDICINES:

Hamilton's Worm-destroying Lozenges.
Which have within sixteen years past cured an immense number of persons of both sexes of every age and in every situation, of various dangerous complaints arising from WORMS, and from obstructions or foulness in the stomach and bowels.

This medicine bears no analogy whatever to others of similar titles so commonly complained of as operating with violence; on the contrary a particular excellence of this remedy is its being suited to every age and constitution. It contains nothing but what is perfectly innocent & is so mild in its operation that it cannot injure the most delicate pregnant lady or the tenderest infant of a week old should no worms exist in the body; but will without pain or gripping cleanse the stomach and bowels of whatever is foul or offensive, and thereby prevent the production of worms and many fatal disorders. The lozenges are particularly efficacious in carrying off all gross humours and eruptions, feverish and bilious complaints, and are the safest and mildest purgative that can be used on any occasion.

Description of Worms, and the symptoms by which they are known.
Worms which infest the human body are chiefly of four kinds viz.—The Terebra or large round worm; The Ascarides or small maw-worm; The Cucurbitina or short flat white worm; and lastly, the Tenia or tape-worm, so called from its resemblance to tape. This is often many yards long and is full of joints. It is most hurtful and most difficult to remove.

Among the symptoms attending worms are—disagreeable breath, especially in the morning; bad and corrupted gums; itching in the nose, and about the seat; convulsions, epileptic fits, and sometimes privation of speech; starting and grinding of the teeth in sleep; irregular appetite, sometimes loathing food and sometimes voracious; purging with slimy and fetid stools; vomiting; large and hard belly; pains and sickness at the stomach; pains in the head and thighs and lowness of spirits; slow fever with small and irregular pulse; a dry cough; excessive thirst; sometimes pale and unhealthy countenance; and sometimes the face bloated and flushed.

Persons afflicted with any of the above symptoms should have immediate recourse to Hamilton's Worm Destroying Lozenges, which have been constantly attended with success in all complaints similar to those above described.

A dose of this medicine given occasionally during the warm season, will effectually prevent "the vomiting and purging of children"—a dreadful disorder which annually destroys thousands of the infant part of our citizens. It is likewise the mildest and most certain remedy known; and has restored to health and strength a great number when in an advanced stage of this fatal complaint. Particular and plain instructions are given for every part of the necessary treatment in such cases.

Children generally take this medicine with eagerness; having a pleasing appearance, and an agreeable taste.

The Restorative Powder for the Teeth and Gums.

For the prevention and cure of BILIOUS and MALIGNANT FEVERS

is recommended
Hahn's ANTI-BILIOUS PILLS
THIS Medicine has been attended with a degree of success highly grateful to the inventor's feelings in several parts of the West Indies and in the Southern and Middle States, &c.

The testimony of a number of persons can be adduced, who have reason to believe that a timely use of this salutary remedy has, under Providence, preserved their lives when in the most alarming circumstances.

Facts of this conclusive nature speak more in favour of a medicine than countenances of pompous eulogy founded on mere assertion.

It is not indeed presumptuously proposed as an infallible cure, but the inventor has every possible reason that can result from extensive experience for believing that a dose of these Pills taken once in every two weeks during the prevalence of our bilious fevers, will prove an infallible preventive; and further, that in the earlier stages of those diseases their use will very generally succeed in restoring health, and frequently in cases esteemed desperate and beyond the power of common remedies.

The operation of these pills is perfectly mild, so as to be used with safety by persons in every situation and of every age.

They are excellently adapted to carry off superfluous bile and prevent its morbid secretions—to restore and amend the appetite—to produce a free perspiration and thereby prevent colds which are often of fatal consequences. A dose never fails to remove a cold if taken on its first appearance: they are celebrated for removing habitual costiveness—sickness at the stomach and severe head-ache—and ought to be taken by all persons on a change of climate.

They have been found remarkably efficacious in preventing and curing disorders attendant on long voyages, and should be procured and carefully preserved for use by every seaman.
